

THE TIME FOR SOCIAL MATTERS IS NOW

Buenos Aires. March 10, 1996. 3 a.m.

Do you realize that the time to address social matters is now? I mean, the real issue behind social development which is the development of consciousness.

This just couldn't have happened before this time. There were many remarkable attempts, and also much struggle and destruction.

But what was sought then was a vindictive type of consciousness, which is mainly a reaction. There is no way out the law of action and reaction. It keeps us bound to the wheel and there is no possible release.

It may seem a fair law at times, but its results always the same: bondage. The free spirits do not react, they act. Because they are creators and make up their own laws, which are always fair because they are universal laws.

I hear over and over the statement: "We are only humans ... ". What message does it convey?

It's implying: "we are not Divine, and therefore we should be governed by other than Divine Law, that is, Human Law".

This, in turn implies: "we are the opposite of the Divine, and Divine Law doesn't serve us well; it is imperfect for us; it doesn't take into account our human side".

This is but a fallacy.

The present time is no longer a time for separation and dichotomy. Now there is only one law: the expansion of consciousness.

This law is not related with reaction, but with creation. Reaction may be used by creation, but can never replace it.

We should pull out ancient dilemmas now. Stop justifying ourselves as "I already did my share", "I tried but couldn't make it" or "I don't commit myself anymore, let others do it".

All that belongs to the past. We do not judge it. We do not praise it. We just let it drop and fall off as we keep going our way.

All that remains are the learnings. The past can teach me, it can never deny my Self.

Those who feel they already made their contribution to social development, and failed -only because reality didn't match their dreams-, and those who feel ashamed for not contributing enough, both are -and we all are- on time to do something now. Now is the time to carry out the very task the whole of humankind needs: the expansion of consciousness.

Let's get at it!
